FEDERAL FUNDING

Through the National Cancer Institute (NCI) Community Oncology Research Program, Illinois CancerCare shares in $2.5 million of annual funding for NCI clinical trials. This allows patients to take part in these critical research efforts at all 12 Illinois CancerCare locations.

FILLING THE FUNDING GAP
$400,000+

The cost of clinical trials exceeds the amount Illinois CancerCare receives from the NCI, and budget challenges have resulted in a loss of more than $3.5 million in NCI funding over the past 10 years.

PHARMA FUNDING

Drug companies need a platform to test their latest cancer therapies. At select Illinois CancerCare clinics, our patients can participate in industry-sponsored clinical trials, funded by pharmaceutical companies, which allow access to drugs before FDA approval.

DEAR FRIENDS IN THE FIGHT,

The word “research” conjures up images of pristine labs, white coats, test tubes and microscopes. That type of early investigation is critical in the quest to develop new, more effective treatments for cancer. But just as important— perhaps more so — is the clinical research that occurs every day here at Illinois CancerCare.

At any given time, across our 12 locations, you’ll find hundreds of patients at various stages in their cancer journeys participating in clinical trials. These studies aren’t merely the final step in bringing tomorrow’s drugs and therapies to market. For many of today’s patients, they are life-savers, life-extenders and quality-of-life-enhancers. And they’re available right here at home because of your financial support.

Illinois CancerCare was founded in 1977 with research at the core of our practice. Since then, more than 10,000 of our patients have participated in nearly 1,500 clinical trials — staying close to home and close to family, friends and support networks. Four decades into our fight, we remain independent, privately owned and committed to taking advantage of the latest research on behalf of our patients.

Your contributions to the Foundation help us keep that promise. Due to cuts in National Cancer Institute (NCI) funding, we’ve seen a loss of $3.5 million in research dollars over the past decade. In 2017, funding was more than $500,000 short of what’s required to run an NCI Community Oncology Research Program. Foundation dollars fill $400,000 of that gap— helping ensure local patients do not lose access to clinical trials.

Illinois CancerCare is THE cancer research arm for the many communities we serve— and YOU keep us armed to stay on top of ever-evolving care. Thank you.

With sincere appreciation,

Greg Gerstner, M.D.

DEFINING CLINICAL TRIALS

Bench Research

Step one in the search for new treatments — occurs in the lab

NCORP

Short for NCI Community Oncology Research Program, a federally funded program for community oncology research

Eligibility Criteria

Defines who may participate in a trial based on a variety of factors, like a certain type or stage of cancer, previous treatments, age, gender, medical history or current health

Principal Investigator

The person, usually a doctor, who creates a plan for the study and leads the trial

Cancer Control Studies (Symptom Management)

Address the symptoms and side effects, like nausea or fatigue, that result from having and treating cancer

Clinical Trial

Final step in determining the safety and effectiveness of new treatments — involves human volunteers and evaluates if a new treatment is better than existing options

Protocol

Outlines the purpose of the trial, what drugs or treatments will be used, what testing will be conducted, the number of people needed, eligibility criteria and what information will be collected

THE FOUR PHASES OF CLINICAL TRIALS*

Phase I Trials

Evaluate how a new drug should be given, how often and at what dosage. They usually enroll only a small number of patients.

Phase II Trials

Continue to test the safety of a new drug in participants and begin to evaluate how it works. They usually focus on a specific type of cancer.

Phase III Trials

Compare the new drug, combination of drugs or surgical procedure to the current standard by randomly assigning participants to the new group or the standard group. They often enroll large numbers of people and occur nationwide.

Phase IV Trials

Evaluate the long-term effects of a new drug over a lengthy period of time for a larger number of patients. They occur after FDA approval of a drug.

* Most Illinois CancerCare trials fall into Phase II or Phase III.

RESEARCH HAS BEEN OUR FOCUS FOR FORTY YEARS.

Dr. Michael Veeder (left) joined Illinois CancerCare in 1982 after completing his oncology training at the Sidney Farber Cancer Center Institute, the oncology research center for Harvard Medical School.

Marsha Kutter (right) helps administer the grant for the National Cancer Institute (NCI) Community Oncology Research Program, also known as NCORP.

WE PUT OUR FIRST PATIENT ON A CLINICAL TRIAL IN 1979

It may be much more sophisticated today, but one thing about cancer research hasn't changed in Dr. Michael Veeder's 35-plus years with Illinois CancerCare. "The fact remains that any treatment for almost any disease has substantial room to improve in terms of effectiveness or side effects," he says. "We're always looking for the next breakthrough that allows therapy to be shorter, easier and better."

Finding new ways to fund breakthroughs is critical, especially as federal funding for community clinical trials remains flat. "People don't understand how expensive research is," Dr. Veeder says. "The drugs may be free, but data collection and analysis are profoundly expensive. The Foundation makes the difference in the number of studies we can offer locally and the number of employees for whom research is their only job."

MYTH

My health insurance won't pay for a clinical trial.

FACT

Most plans do cover the routine patient care costs of clinical trials. We'll review your insurance coverage in advance so you can make an informed decision.

SUPPORTING THE AREA'S LARGEST RESEARCH STAFF

"Our research staff is larger than that of many academic hospitals. The Foundation's support makes that possible."

When Marsha Kutter joined Illinois CancerCare as a research assistant in 1984, she was the research department. Today, as research business administrator, she's part of a dedicated team of 25 employees.

"It's because of the research department and support staff that our physicians are able to offer clinical trials to patients, and it's because of donors to the Foundation that we're able to fund that staff," Marsha says. "Research is not a money-making enterprise. It's a money-losing enterprise. Because it's so important to our patients, the practice finds ways to support the program. Foundation dollars are more important than ever."

A NEW STANDARD OF CARE FOR BREAST CANCER PATIENTS

Every treatment offered today originated as a clinical trial. New drugs and therapies become standard care when research proves they're more effective than what's already available. A landmark new study involving more than 100 Illinois CancerCare patients is changing that standard for breast cancer patients worldwide.

One of the largest breast cancer treatment trials ever conducted revealed that women at low or intermediate risk of recurrence may safely skip chemotherapy without hurting their chances of survival. The focus of the study was a gene test, called Oncotype DX Breast Cancer Assay, performed on tumor samples after surgery.

"We receive a score after submitting a patient's specimen that tells us if there's risk of the cancer returning," says Dr. Madhuri Bajaj. "The vast majority of patients have an intermediate score. They are our clinical conundrum — are they high risk or low risk? This study helped take away that gray area. Now we're confident recommending to patients with certain scores that it's safe to skip chemotherapy. We can make an evidence-based decision rooted in sound clinical data."

MAKING RESEARCH ACCESSIBLE
FOR EVERY PATIENT

As Illinois CancerCare's Director of Research, Jamie Harper sees firsthand the essential role the Foundation plays in giving local patients access to the latest treatments. "We talk about treatment toxicity, but financial toxicity is a big issue, too," she says. "Some patients may choose not to pursue treatment because of the cost. The Foundation helps us keep that from happening. Donor dollars don't just fund new cancer research. They also help pay for gas cards or genetic testing—little things that help patients take advantage of research that's already underway."

RESEARCH IS AT THE CORE OF
EVERY TREATMENT
WE HAVE TODAY.

Dr. Madhuri Bajaj is a medical oncologist practicing at the Peoria and Peru clinics. She also oversees the research department at Illinois CancerCare.

CANCER TREATMENT AND QUALITY OF LIFE ARE EQUALLY IMPORTANT.

Ellen Steffen (left) is a five-year breast cancer survivor. Participating in a cancer control trial helped her deal with the extreme hot flashes caused by her treatment.

Chetaye Knox (right) is one of Illinois CancerCare's lead clinical research associates. She screens patients for eligibility for cancer control trials, which may help improve quality of life.

RESEARCH THAT EXTENDS BEYOND CURES

For some patients, the side effects of cancer treatment are almost as debilitating as the disease itself. Nausea, fatigue and loss of appetite are among the most common symptoms. For Ellen Steffen, who was diagnosed with Stage 3B breast cancer in 2014, extreme hot flashes caused by hormonal therapy severely affected her quality of life, both at home and on the job.

After enrolling in a cancer control trial—a research study that focuses on ways to minimize the toxicities brought on by cancer or its treatment—Ellen saw her hot flashes drop from more than 70 each week to just a handful. “I saw such a big difference and slept so much better,” she says. “The process was very easy. Chetaye was so compassionate throughout the trial and made it feel like a safe, positive experience.”

TREATMENT FOR LIFE

Advancements in treatment mean patients are living longer—and that makes quality of life during and after cancer more important than ever. “The effects of drugs can last for years,” says Dr. Nguyen Le-Lindqwister (above, left). “It’s our responsibility to recognize the symptoms and see if a clinical trial can offset them.”

Illinois CancerCare oncologists rely on clinical research associates (CRAs) like Courtney Brown (above, right) to help keep the focus on quality of life. “CRAs work behind the scenes screening all of our patients for potential cancer control trials,” Dr. Le-Lindqwister says. “We work as a team. We couldn’t do it without them.”

“Some patients want to participate to help other people down the road. That’s noble, but we’re here to help you now. You are our priority.”

NAVIGATING THE RESEARCH JOURNEY

At most cancer treatment sites, about 3 percent of patients participate in clinical trials. At Illinois CancerCare, it’s 7 percent. That’s due in large part to the practice’s team of research navigators — positions funded partially by Foundation dollars. Navigators screen patients for clinical trial matches, then walk eligible patients and families through every step of the process.

A dedicated research staff — one with a reputation for efficient processes and clean data — makes Illinois CancerCare more attractive to study organizers, which means more treatment possibilities for patients. “We bring in trials where the next closest site might be the Mayo Clinic,” says navigator Ashton Todd. “If you live in Galva, you can come to our Galesburg clinic and get the same treatment provided at Dana Farber or MD Anderson. Sometimes we open studies that aren’t even available at those places yet.”

Carrie Geoffroy, Heather Thulean, Angela Earles and Ashton Todd are Illinois CancerCare clinical research navigators. Every day, they screen 100 percent of patients on the schedule for clinical trial eligibility.

GENETIC TESTING GIVES PEOPLE THE POWER TO BE PROACTIVE.

Kim Tauke, an advanced practice nurse at Illinois CancerCare, has received extensive training in cancer genomics through City of Hope, a leading research and treatment center.

FUNDING PEACE OF MIND AND PREVENTION

For those with a family history of cancer, genetic testing can provide peace of mind by ruling out a genetic link — or it can allow those who are predisposed to take action. Though the test itself is simple, usually just a blood draw or saliva sample, the psychological ramifications can be huge.

A nurse practitioner with extensive cancer genetics training, Kim Tauke not only educates patients about the pros and cons, but also provides essential post-test counseling. “We help people deal with the results,” she says. “Just because you have a gene, that’s not a diagnosis. It’s an opportunity to be proactive, put a screening plan in place and identify preventative options. You can’t control genetics, but you can control lifestyle.”

Many insurance plans cover the cost of testing, but Foundation dollars help fill the gap when patients need support. “We want to make sure every patient who should get tested does get tested,” Kim says, “as well as making genetic testing available to their families.”

LOCAL DOLLARS, LOCAL RESEARCH

After Theresa Tracy succumbed to pancreatic cancer in 2010, her family wanted to take an active role in fighting the disease. They started the Theresa Tracy Trot in 2012 to generate local fundraising dollars. Proceeds donated to the Foundation are earmarked specifically for pancreatic cancer purposes.

In 2017, the Foundation used these funds to establish Community Pancreatic Cancer Genetic Testing, available at no charge to any family member of an Illinois CancerCare pancreatic cancer patient. In 2018, the program expanded to include all first- and second-generation relatives of pancreatic cancer patients, regardless of where they received their treatment.

IMMUNOTHERAPY AND TARGETED THERAPY ARE OUR NEWEST WEAPONS.

Tim Shaner and his sister Becky Magalhães — who comes with him to treatment when his wife Sue isn't able to attend — appreciate the quality-of-life benefits his targeted therapy clinical trial delivers.

TREATING THE DISEASE, MANAGING THE SIDE EFFECTS

When Tim Shaner was diagnosed with chronic lymphocytic leukemia in 2012, it was a “watch and wait” situation. By 2016, his disease had progressed, and so had his options. “When he was diagnosed, the treatment was chemotherapy, which might come with nausea, fatigue and lack of appetite,” says Dr. Jane Liu, Tim’s oncologist. “Now he has the opportunity to be on targeted therapy specifically for his disease. It’s a pill form of treatment that provides better quality of life.”

For Tim, who was still farming 1,000 acres of corn and soybeans with his brother when he began treatment, freedom from those side effects has been a huge benefit of participating in a clinical trial. Now retired, he enjoys gardening and traveling with his wife Sue. “I’m 67 years old,” he says. “I don’t have the same energy level I did when I was 50 or 60, but I have enough energy to do what I want to do.”

MYTH

People who participate in clinical trials are used as guinea pigs.

FACT

Clinical trials aren’t experiments. They’re a chance to be part of research using emerging drugs or state-of-the-art treatments. The research team monitors you closely, and your safety is the focus throughout.

Targeted Therapy

Use of drugs or other substances to identify and attack specific cancer cells with less harm to normal cells.

Immunotherapy

Use of substances made by the body or in a lab to improve or restore immune system function — boosting the body’s natural defenses to fight cancer.

WHAT’S NEXT IN RESEARCH

Big data. Automation. Artificial intelligence. Those aren’t normally words associated with cancer treatment, but according to Dr. Jane Liu (left), they soon will be. Advances in treatment and rapid approval of drugs are making it challenging to accrue enough patients to clinical trials “the old-fashioned way” — by reading trial documents, reviewing charts and making matches manually.

“Technology can automate manual, labor-intensive processes and make the clinical trial process more transparent,” she says. “That should make it easier for patients and their families, no matter where they’re located, to find a clinical trial match. When they can see the options themselves, they’re more empowered and more engaged — and more engaged patients tend to have better outcomes.”

FEATURED FUNDRAISER BIKERS FOR TA-TAS

Nancy Borum and her husband had only been riding motorcycles for a few years when she had the idea for a breast cancer benefit ride. "We were just sitting around with a bunch of friends one night, and I said I'd create a route and charge them all $10 to ride it," she says. "The next morning we had 10 bikes and 15 people ready to go. It just grew from there."

Grew is an understatement. The 2017 Bikers for Ta-Tas event drew 1,300 bikes and 1,800 participants, with 100 percent of the proceeds donated to the UnityPoint Foundation and the Illinois CancerCare Foundation for local breast cancer awareness and screenings. "Most people come because they're survivors or they know a survivor. Just about anyone you talk to knows someone who's been through this," Nancy says. "The biker community is so generous and so passionate about this cause."

Nancy Borum (left) started Bikers for Ta-Tas after losing her grandmother and aunt to breast cancer. Her mother was a 12-year survivor of the disease.

Betsy Fannin (right) is Nancy's sister, a board member and volunteer for Bikers for Ta-Tas, and an eight-year breast cancer survivor who received her treatment at Illinois CancerCare.

MYTH

I might end up with a sugar pill if I participate in a clinical trial.

FACT

Placebos—drugs with no active substances—are rarely used in cancer clinical trials. Instead, trials compare the standard treatment plus a new treatment to the standard treatment plus a placebo. Your physician or research navigator will tell you in advance if a placebo is used in your study.

MYTH
Clinical trials benefit drug companies, not patients.

FACT

As a participant, you get access to newer treatments not yet available to others, and you may receive additional tests that can provide valuable information. If the treatment is more effective than the current one, you may be among the first to experience the improved results.

MYTH

It's up to my doctor whether
I participate in a clinical trial.

FACT

Your physician (and your research navigator) will walk you through the details of the trial and explain the advantages and disadvantages. But the decision to participate is up to you.

OUR MISSION

The Illinois CancerCare Foundation is committed to funding Research, Education, Patient Support and Assistance for a disease which affects 1 in 3 people. As we fight to find cures for many types of cancers through nationally recognized research initiatives, it is our strong belief that our patients must have available to them every possible weapon in their battle. The Illinois CancerCare Foundation seeks charitable support from throughout central and western Illinois to accomplish these objectives.
